4:30 - 5:30pm - Session 1 - Industry Overview and Strategic Positioning for 2019-2020.

Presenter: Kevin Organisciak, UniversityCoach

Friday, July 19

9:00am Continental Breakfast

9:30am - Session 2 - “Mommy, where do SAT Scores Come From?” : Scaling, Equating and How They Affect SAT Scores and Students.

Presenter, Dr. Aaron Golumbskie, Senior Tutor, Prep Matters.

Following its 2016 redesign, the SAT has produced a number of curious outcomes: score reports with two different percentiles, two years without an official ACT concordance, calls to #rescoretheJuneSAT and more. These outcomes have given rise to a number of hot takes, blogs and think pieces about SAT scores but very few of these have demonstrated an understanding of how the SAT is actually scored.

Let's dive into the nuts and bolts to better understand how the SAT is measuring what it's measuring, even if we don't fully understand what it's measuring. We'll discuss the creation of the Nationally Representative sample, against which all scores are measured; the common-item nonequivalent group design of the SAT; the chained equipercentile equating method used by the College Board for each test; and even talk a little about how the ACT does things and how they've been able to go for so long without using any experimental sections.

Buckle up, statistics tutors. You're gonna have some fun with this one.

10:30am - Session 3 - Business Integration Debate. Should I add College Advising to my Tutoring Business? Should I add Tutoring to my College Advising Business?

Presenter: Mike Bergin, Founder, Chariot Learning & TestBright

Mike and I will debate the idea of integrating College Planning Services with Tutoring and vice-versa. As Mike has made clear in the past, one can be successful without adding College Planning. On the other hand, as a consultant, I have spent progressively more time over the past 2 years helping companies add and expand complementary service.

11:30am - Session 4 - College Planning 102: Preparing Parents

Presenter: Cyndi Menegaz, Director, SmartTrack

In this Livestream workshop presented by SMARTTRACK College Funding, Cyndi Menegaz will discuss the critical role of college funding in the college planning process, how helping parents prepare for the financial end can benefit student outcomes and why/how this is so important to test prep, tutoring and college admissions professionals.

12:30-1:30pm - Working Lunch - Box lunch provided

Panel Discussion - The Impact of "Operation Varsity Blues."

Although the college admissions scandal known as "Operation Varsity Blues" gave supplemental educational services and, for that matter, the College Board and ACT a collective "black eye," the client feedback ranges from outrage to outright affirmation. We will discuss the impact of Varsity Blues across the industry, at the business level, and in the context of different regions of the country.

1:30pm-2:30pm - Session 5 - Changes Observed in Recent SAT & ACT Test Administrations

Presenter: Evan Wessler, Vice President of Academics, Method Test Prep

Evan and the team from Method spend a good deal of time researching and deconstructing recently current administrations the SAT and its counterpart, the ACT. Evan will share with us the patterns his team has identified in terms of question types and concepts appearing on the recent tests.

2:30 - 3:30pm Session 6 - Building a Successful Marketing Plan

Presenter: Kevin Organisciak, Founder, TPAPT

Test Prep Professionals (our fore-bearer) was essentially launched on the strength its early "for hire" marketing plans. 10 years later, the marketing plan has evolved but it is still based on the core principles found in early plans. Kevin will walk us through the basic planning as well as tactical development for a quarterly sales-marketing plan.

3:30-4:00pm - Session 8 - Trends in Online Education & Training

Presenter: Peter Disabb, Vice President of Content Development, GoBoard

In a year over year view, the number of students using online resources for test prep, high school tutoring, ESL prep, and college admissions prep continues to outpace traditional classroom based education. Peter will discuss trends being observed by his team and if/when/how to leverage at a business level.

4:00-5:00pm: Inflection Point: Test Optional Policies and the Test Prep Industry

Presenter: Travis Minor, Founder, Open Door Education

In this session we explore the impetus for, the impact of, and the future for Test Optional admissions policies. We will interweave recent research with current legal cases and university press releases to better understand the incentives that shape university decisions relating to test optional policies. We will also explore how The College Board and the ACT are modifying their corporate strategies to anticipate changes in admissions policies and to ensure their continued relevance. Ultimately, we will identify important considerations for tutoring companies that will be affected by upheaval in admissions testing policies and provide specific recommendations for organizations navigating a changing landscape.
